

- 13 When a gas is compressed at constant temperature, the pressure exerted by the gas on the walls of the container increases.

This is because

- A the average speed of the gas molecules increases.
- B the average distance between the gas molecules decreases.
- C the frequency of collisions between the gas molecules increases.
- D the frequency of collisions of the gas molecules with the walls increases.