

9

Answer: C

ZX is a compression at constant pressure.
An adiabatic compression will be accompanied by an increase in temperature of the system while adiabatic expansion will be accompanied by a decrease in temperature of the system.
If XY is an isothermal expansion, then process YZ will be moving from a point of lower temperature to higher temperature, which is true, since there is a compression.

10	Answer: D