4 Which of the following statements is true?

A When a moving object experiences friction, the work done against friction is independent of the path taken by the object.

B An object which experiences a resistive force always reaches terminal speed.

C Friction always hinders motion.

D There are certain situations in which friction does not cause energy to be lost to the surroundings.