

28B

The number of photoelectrons emitted per second ($\frac{N}{t}$) is directly proportional to the intensity of incident radiation. Since the intensity of radiation is constant, the number of photoelectrons varies proportional with time.

29B