

|   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
|---|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| 2 | Answer: D                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
|   | time taken to travel first 90 km = <math>\frac{\text{distance}}{\text{&lt;speed&gt;}} = \frac{90}{80} = 1.125 \text{ hour}</math> time taken for remaining 110 km = 0.875 hour <math>\text{&lt; speed &gt;} = \frac{\text{total distance}}{\text{total time}} = \frac{110 \text{ km}}{0.875 \text{ hour}} = 126 \text{ km h}^{-1}</math> |

|   |           |
|---|-----------|
| 3 | Answer: A |
|---|-----------|